AFTER January next Delaware will be the only State flying the Stars and Stripes from the top of the whipping-post. It is not true that a civil-service examination is to be held in order to fill the vacant office of caterer for the Senate. THE Arkansas Democracy has bisected itself. It is hoped that this heroic treatment may result beneficially to the State.

THE opening of the Guiteau case by Colonel Corkhill yesterday was a fine effort. We give it all in our report except the mere narrative of the shooting.

The man who opposes the movement for breaking the Solid South, whether he be a Bourbon or a Republican, is using his influence to perpetuate sectional strife. THERE is a slight-error in the Post's di-agnosis of the Democratic ailment in Maryland. It isn't bad "fences," but offenses, to which they owe their failing Comer-nunting has been developed into one of the most successful of all our varied industries. It is less exacting than any other industry in the matter of protection. THE ready-made Cabinets now being tributed so profusely before the election

THE rumored disagreement between the War Department and the Signal Service Bureau has not developed a large storm area, nor is there any alarming exaltation of the mercurial column in either the War or Weather Office.

THERE have been moments of doubt whether Mr. MacVeagh had resigned or not; but there was never a shadow of resigned to Mr. MacVeagh's permanent retirement from public life.

WE suspect there is no truth in the prevalent rumor that the Virginia Bourbons will show their contempt for "a Yankee institution" by continuing their crow diet, instead of providing themselves with turkey on Thanksgiving Day.

REFORMERS who would discover the statesmen should be promptly directed.

NEITHER in the army or navy, nor in any branch of either, should there be competitive examinations of applicants for appointment unless the appointing powers intend, in good faith, to be guided by the results of such examinations. So much common fairness demands, Eveny step in the grand career of liberty and progress which this Nation has taken in the last twenty years has been of the white opponent's political freetaken in the last twenty years has been made possible only by overcoming Demthis fact cannot but tend to reconcile the President to Democratic displeasure.

In every Southern State there are thousands of so-called Democrats who have no real sympathy with Bourbonism. They are the sort of men who, in the North, are in the van of the Republican party. When the South is readjusted these men will find their rightful places.

Ir would not be more ludicrously abdown the Washington Monument, in of Indiana and New York. order to prevent that structure from going "up among the little stars" and "sailing round the moon," than it was for Emperor William to entreat Bismarck not to resign.

General Chalmers professed great interest in the census last winter. This induces us to hope that he has not neglected to furnish the Census Bureau a carefully tabulated statement showing the relation between Democratic majorities and cow-itch pods in each of the counties of the Shoestring District.

Ir the effete monarchies over the water could be made to realize in the broadest amplitude of the great fact what a terrible engine of destruction we have in Admiral Porter's torpedo-boat, the Alarm, we should hear nothing from them but the most saccharine conciliation until they could reconstruct their navies.

THE junior recruits in the marine cavalry used to be so phenomenally credulous that they could be induced to take financial honor. But the boys can't be imposed on in that way any more. In fact, the trainer of "Thompson's colt" is the only party whose gullibility is equal to this demand.

THE proposition to have a commission case, is again revived, and is to be powerfully pushed. It looks well on its face, but will not bear inspection. The inverted harmony of a volunteer choir or tended valiantly against the capitation amateur musical association would be the tax, or selling the right to vote. Hatred chief characteristic of an art commission; of equal rights for the emancipated black besides, the tendency of such a board to men has caused that party, in its weak become the nucleus of a ring would be and vicious senility, to repudiate all that almost irresistible.

The statements going the rounds of the press connecting the name of George C. Gorham with an appointment to office are without foundation, and their origin is to him unknown. In response to the unfriendly slurs of certain candidate during the past thirty years. | service.

A Parallel.

In 1860 the Republican candidate was chosen President over the two Demoeratic candidates. In 1861-'62 the Union Republican party, composed of all who were unconditionally for the cause of the Government against rebellion, took the place of the party which had elected Mr. Lincoln. The mighty Douglas rallied nundreds of thousands of his followers to the support of the administration, by out whose head he had been defeated for the Presidency. Breckinridge men, like Butler, Dickinson, and Holt, with thousands of their followers, also took the same course. Had the support of the Government been confined to the men well as in the South. The union of all Union men in those days was accomplished in the face of precisely the same kind of difficulties which attended the situation in Virginia prior to the accomplishment of the conlition of anti-Bourbon forces there. There were Union men in 1861 who would not be called Republicans. But as the Republican party had no policy but the preservation of the Union it easily rallied all Union men to its aid. In 1881 in Virginia there were many thousands of law-and-order Democrats in organized revolt against the stupid Bourbon policy, which consisted in staying mad because the rebellion was defeated and the blacks emancipated and enfranchised. These men were unwilling to be called Republicans; but as the Republican party had no policy but the maintenance of the Constitution and the laws it sacrificed no principle in going over to the Liberal Democrats, who had dropped their party name, and were dealing stalwart blows at the old Bourbon Democratic party. As the field of carnage at Gettysburg. in 1861-'62 there were Republicans who were unwilling to see, the Union cause recruited by any who would not train in the regulation party uniform, so in 1881 there was a "straightout" facset up by Democratic newspapers are tion in Virginia which looked with dislikely to prove quite as prophetic as the trust and jealousy upon men who would "Hancock Cabinets" which they dis- do battle for the national cause if only they could be known as Liberals and not as partisan Republicans. As in 1861 the great tide of patriotism rose high above the length of the rope by which many small political skiffs were made fast to and popular enthusiasm inundated the small-beer Republican politicians who thought to stay it with a mop and pail. The uprising of a great people in 1861 for the maintenance of the Union, and, doubt that the country would be entirely as Douglas said, to prevent the United States from being blotted out of the map of the world, bore but small relation to the sole issue upon which, five months before, the Republican party had triumphed, viz., the non-extension of slavery into the Territories,

The uprising of the people which can alone prevent the restoration of the Bourbon Democracy to power in 1884 will bear equally small relation to the lines which most fruitful source of corruption in poli- have divided Union men from confedertics can find it in the extravagant emolu- ates. The man would have been laughed ments of many local offices. To the cor. at who would have talked about slavery rection of this evil the efforts of provincial in the Territories amid the roar and din of the battle-summer of 1861. The man who shall hereafter seek to feed the people on the questions of twenty years ago will be left far behind in the march of events. The enemy we have to contend with is Bourbonism. It is the spirit of resistnnce to the new order of things. It is a sullen and rebellious spirit against the new Nation born out of the civil war. It dom as of the negro's personal freedom. ocratic resistance. The contemplation of It is hostility to majority rule wherever itself is in the minority, and bold and unhesitating political conquest wherever lawless force can seize and fraud maintain its sway. It is an irreconcilable faction, thirsting for reprisal and revenge Its purpose, if it could attain power would be to treat the period which has intervened since the first inauguration of Lincoln as an interregnum. It divided the North and made the South solid, captured the two Houses of Congress, and was only kept out of the White House surd to detail a robust policeman to hold this year by slight majorities in the States

It controls swarms of insects in the Re publican party in the North, which it employs to sting and distract that organization. It has whisperers who pour flattery into the ears of the ambitious, and many a neat and trimly-dressed theorist, perfumed like a milliner," who, when campaigns are ended, engages in exasperating drivel about the bad influence of party organization, or, as he lispingly calls it, "the machine."

It offers its services to Envy when the latter would strike at Merit, and recruits sneakery whenever this rebels against manliness. Such is Bourbonism in America. It is near the crisis of its fate. It has shared power with its foe of late years, and is filled with wrath at the discontinuance of favors. It has lost Virginia, which was the backbone of the confederacy, and finds its opponents led by old comrades who refuse to be buried alive in the tomb of the last generation. It will use its almost equal power in Senate and House to foil and baffle the Administration. Will the friends of some stock in Funder pretenses of superior | Liberty, Progress, and Nationality be less determined and united?

We shall not overcome the subtlety and strength of our formidable enemy in 1884 except by a union of all who are op-POSED TO THE RESTORATION OF THE BOUR-BONS TO POWER. This should be realized now, before we have been further torn of artists to decide what statues, paintings, by senseless divisions concerning men, &c., are worthy to be bought by Congress, or turned aside to consider the mighty and how much should be paid in each problem of distributing clerships by rule,

Is its blooming youth and rigorous manhood the Democratic party conwas commendable in its old-time creed. It now contends for this tax-at least in a part of the Union-as zealously as it opposed the same proposition when it was capable of a square and manly struggle for a principle. THE Indian is not the only resident of newspapers it may be said that this country who will not learn the Enghe was the Republican nominee for an lish language. . SQUANDERING THE FUNDS.

How McVey Spent the Government Money to Hunt Up Accomplices.

It appears now that Attorney-General MacVeagh, immediately after General Garfield was shot, instructed every detective in the employ of the Department of Justice to proceed to work and to employ every agency they had or could gather to discover whether Guiteau had any ac-complice. This search was without effect, but it was made at great cost, and the Attorney-General suddenly found that he was left without the necessary contingent fund for the Department; and, probably fearing that he would be charged small political skiffs were made fast to the wharf of party, so in 1881, in Virginia, with extravagance in this use of Department moneys, and that he would be asked some pertithe flood of patriotism, common sense, nent and annoying questions concerning the matter, he abandoned his office. Added to this was the fact that some detectives in his employ, or somebody else—"probably Blaine"— told President Arthur all about it. Certain it is President Arthur knows all about it, and knows, further, that MacVeagh went into an inquiry with Government money in large quantities, not be-cause he was really Garfield's friend, but to glorify cause he was really Garnelo's Friend, out to geori-limself by the discovery of accomplices of Guiteat. The depletion of the contingent fund of the De-partment of Justice brings this matter out now and Congress will develop it fully in December MacVeagh was once anxious enough to tak charge of the star-route cases, to the exclu-sion of the District Attorney; but he was more anxylors to absorbe the Guiteau prosecution whe anxious to abandon the Guiteau pressecution wher discovered that President Garfield was more than apt to die, and that his instanting inquiry which was meant to involve Arthur, had nothing in it, while he had spent an immense amount o ernment money to prove a negative. No der he resigned. There is, to speak it mildly, great feeling in well-informed circles here because, first, Attorney-General MacVessch abandoned the star-route cases, and second, because he did not conduct the finiteau case, as any state case arising should be in his care.—Washington dispatch to Brooklyn Eagle.

This 'nformation was also given to Woodward. About this time the interests of Woodward and Gibson began to clash. Each wanted to control the work, and each one, was running a separate branch. It was Wood-ward who captured Redell. The statement made to McVey by Redell was seriously criminat-MeVey by Redell was seriously criminating to borsey. But soon afterward Redell hanged his mind, and, seeing the peculiar peal on in which he was placed, determined to decive MeVey. The Attorney-ticneral wanted furner details, and Redell told him they were among borsey's private papers, and that no one had access to them except borsey and himself. MeVey dvised him to steal the papers. This was just that Redell wanted, and he made an affidavit to the effect that MeVey had so advised him. Redell pretended to be diagnisted at MeVey's infanous proposal and caused his sworn statement in he matter to be placed in President Garitell's tands. This statement is believed to have been in the President Sarticles.

PREHISTORIC RELICS.

Valuable and Important Discovery b College Students. The Toner Scientific Circle of George own College sent a delegation of its members yes terday to investigate a locality recently discovered to contain fragments of soapstone pottery. Some laborers were engaged to dig, and the party prolaborers were engaged to dig, and the party processed to the farm of Lewis Kengla, esq., by whom permission had been given to search. Mr. Kengla's interest in the pursuit of archaeological researches has been transmitted to his son, who is a member of the society above named, and after pledging as to the locality should there be a "flud," the young men set to work. The result of the afternoon's work was a pile of nearly one hundred relies of a former age. Many of the fragments were so large as to indicate most conclusively their use. One in particular was undoubtedly a punch bowl, and did not bear the usual marks of kettles, pois, or ordinary utensils. It was very large, the cutting and trimming was most skillfully done, and there was no evidence of its having been used over the fire. The greater portion of the pieces were of pots and bowls of modernts size—some rudely formed and some bearing evidence of a high degree of mechanical skill. The young gentlemen congratulate themselves on their discovery, and propose another trip at an early day. Meanwhile they keep their own counsel.

Oyster Commission Merchants It has been the custom for many years for men to be employed on the wharves regularly as oyster commission merchants by the captains of oyster boats and paid five cents a gallon of cyster boats and paid five cents a gallon for selling. The trade has never been interfored with until this season, when the Commissioners ordered that the law be enforced compelling these men to take out licenses. Henry Raff, special license agent of the District, yesterday notified nineteen of these agents that if they did not take out licenses by Saturday, the 19th linst, proceedings would be instituted against them. This class of commercial agents are so numerous that the enforcement of the law will cause, it is thought, quite an important increase of the revenue from licenses.
